

The Australian Women's Register

Entry type: Resource
Entry ID: AWH003816

Cassandra Pybus interviewed by Sara Dowse [sound recording]

Repository National Library of Australia, Oral History and Folklore Collection

Reference ORAL TRC 6001

Date Range 18-Aug-08 - 19-Aug-08

Access Access open for research, personal copies and public use.?Access open for research, personal copies and public

Finding Aid Timed summary (10 p.) and uncorrected transcript (typescript, 233 leaves)

Details

Access open for research, personal copies and public use.??Cassandra Pybus speaks about why she became a historian; school experiences and influences; growing up in Tasmania; her parents; the move to the mainland; her attitudes to feminism; her education, tertiary and PhD studies; university life in the 60s, 70s; joining the Victorian Public Service as an advisor; Island editorship (1987-1993)(Tasmania);her first book publications; her thoughts on Tasmania; travel to North America for further studies; American politics and society (2008); Australia in comparison; the demise of print culture; her current aspirations; her ancestor, Richard Pybus; academic freedom; Orr case; the background to her book, White Rajah; her Canadian connections; the East-west divides; the quality of Canadian writing.??Pybus discusses her book, Till Apples Grow on Orange Trees; the movement towards a new historical approach; Colonial history, settler societies; her book, The Devil and James McAuley (biography) and the public reaction; politics and literature; "Raven Road"; Colonial history and its audience; Negros on First Fleet; America's fascination with its own history and Australian indifference; gender and intellectuality; culture wars; history publishing; the consequences of racial essentialism; where we are today; the forthcoming American elections; her career, life and writing; her plans for the future; spinoffs from her book, Epic Journeys of Freedom and after; her search for emotional contentment.

Author Details

Alannah Croom

Created 6 April 2018

Last modified 6 April 2018